Judge Blake Overrules the Motion for a New Trial and Gives His Reason.

Points Raised by Mr. Balliet, the Defendant's Attorney Not Ac-

A Juror Fully Competent to Serve Though He May Have Read Newspaper

The court room was well filled yesterday afternoon, the occasion being the hearing of the motion for a new trial in the Bryson made a strong argument in lavor of his elient, raising points of law and submitting the affidavit which was mentioned yester-motions for new trials in civil cases which ion is in substance as follows:

n, in keeping with its character and nd am reasonably familiar with all the oints which have been raised by counsel.

have considered the case without any found guilty by the jury by whom he was tried.

The grounds upon which this motion are briedicated are, first, in reference to the impaneling of what are termed prejudicial urors. Our statutes make the presiding ustice the trier of jurors to ascertain whether or not they have blas or prejudice, and in the exercise of that prerogative certain limitations have been pre-scribed by the statute. It has been truly remarked by counsel that our statute is hing more nor less than a reperhaps nothing more nor less than a reit-eration of the common law as incorporated in the statute on the matter of this preju-dice of jurors. In the case of Common-wealth against Webster, 5th Cushing, 297 Chief Justice Shaw said in substance that the material inquiries contemplated by the the material inquiries contemplated by the statute, as applicable to this case, were, whether the juror had formed or expressed an opinion, or was sensible of any bias or prejudice in regard thereto. The word prejudice seemed to imply nearly the same thing as opinion; a prejudgment of the case, and not necessarily an enuity or ill-will against either party. The statute intended to exclude any person who had made up his mind, or formed a judgment in advance, in favor of either side. Yet, the opinion or indirect must be something more than a indment must be something more than a vague impression, formed from casual conversations with others, or from reading imperfect, abbreviated newspaper reports. It must be such an opinion upon the merits of the question as would be ikely to bias or prevent a candid judgme apon a full hearing of the evidence. If one had formed what in some sense might be called an opinion, but which yet fell shor of exciting any bias or prejudice he might conscientiously discharge his duty as a juror. Now, we have a statute under which when a juror testifies that he has a opinion or an impression that is formed from reading newspapers, or from public rumor, that then upon inquiry had by the court, and the judge being satisfied that he can render a verdict according to the law from reading newspapers really had no opinions that the court regarded as such; hat, except to state that I have no doubt of its being constitutional, as I have had oc-casion to investigate the question very tices of intention to move for a new truel that one of the grounds alleged is that no venue had been proven. Inasmuch as this ase will go to the appellate court. I describe the montana Central Pails of the Montana Centr o say that the finding of the body of Mrs. andstrom in this shaft, described by the ritnesses, would in the absence of any hearing denied. other evidence, afford a presumption for the court to decide that the woman was killed in that particular spot. And the court yet alive, the bruises upon her person, and that she could not have come there of her burg block.

bwn volition, that there must have been some outside agency to place her in the condition she was when found, afford suffi-cient grounds for supposing that she came to her death there, and Dr Morris has tesfied that this shaft is in Lewis and Clarke ounty, Montana territory. In my judgment, then, the venue has been properly stablished by the Lewisson. stablished by the testimony.

Now, in reference to this newly discoverep testimony, counsel has referred to the theory upon which this case was presented to the jury. It is a well-known fact that counsel in addressing a jury will present the facts of the case as they view them, and their deductions therefrom, and it often happens that counsel will give wrong reasons, and draw from the evigrong reasons, and draw from the evi dence erroneous conclusions in presenting the case to the jury. In the case of the Commonwealth against Webster, to which I have aiready adverted, it is a singular fact that there the defendant was accused of having perpetrated the alleged homicide in four different ways, one with a hammer. n four different ways, one with a hammer, ne with a knife, one by either pounding r beating, and the fourth was by some neans or other to the grand jurors un-mown. Counsel addressed themselves to he jury on those different theories, and have advanced theories in this case, would have nothing to do in determining whither or not the party is guilty. This newly discovered evidence, in my judgment, does not explain at all the views or the opinion which I entertain regarding the case. Dixon testifies as the reasons why he made an investigation of that shaft, that he saw the foot prints of a woman within a short distance of the mouth of the shaft, that he thought the appearance of the shaft indicated that some person had been recently down there from the removal of dust, and that a pole which was in the shaft looked as if it had been recently touched by some person. These are the reasons which he gives for having made, the investigation gives for having made the investigation These, however, are not at all material in his case, only in so far as the ultimate fac this case, only in so far as the ultimate fact is concerned, to-wit: that he descended the shaft and discovered the body of the deceased; and that these foot prints may have been made by some of those parties referred to in the depositions containing the newly discovered evidence does not affect the fact that the body of Mrs. Lundstrom was found in the shaft. In this connection I will state that the strongest facts and the most damaging circumstances nection I will state that the strongest facts and the most damaging circumstances proven in the trial are not at all affected by this newly discovered evidence. The facts which satisfy me of the guilt of the defendant are that he was living with this woman, holding illicit relations with her, had made threats against her, not only here but in the state from which they came, had several quarrels and misunderstandings with her, and was the that was seen with her when she was alive, and I refer now to the afternoon of the day of her disappearance. This woman un-doubtedly left that house expecting to return to it; about that there can be no ques-tion of doubt. She had paid a month's rent in advance, and never had communicated to anybody her intention of going away. She never did return, and this de-fendant told parties who had asked about ing person, acting in a suspicious manner, in the vicinity of this shaft at different in the vicinity of this shaft at different times, or that the footprints were made by other persons than the deceased, that does not affect what I consider the strong facts of this case. True, it is a case of circumstantial evidence, but I am unable to see wherein the links that constitute the chain are in any way broken or affected by this newly discovered evidence.

As to the defendant's right to have this motion passed upon by the trial court I

As to the defendant's right to have this motion passed upon by the trial court, I agree with counsel, that is better that in a case of this magnitude, the judge who presided at the trial should pass upon the motior for a new trial. This was a privilege which the defendant could have enjoyed in this case, if he deemed it important. It was a matter well known to counsel for defendant that Judge McConneil had resigned, and was soon to be succeeded on the beach; but sufficient time had intervened between the trial of this case and the retirement of Judge McConneil to have afforded ample opportunity to prepare a the retirement of Judge McConnell to have afforded ample opportunity to prepare a statement and have this motion passed upon by him, so that there was nothing to prevent this defendant from having this motion heard before the judge who tried the case. In reference to this case in Wisconsin, to which counsel for defendant refers, it clearly appears in the first place.

So, upon a calm review of all the facts of this case, with all the light that I have been able to give it, I regretfully come to the conclusion that this defendant has been justly convicted by the jury who sat in his case, and that he has had a fair and impartial trial. The motion, therefore, for a new trial will be overruled. Helena Cricket Club. There will be a meeting of the members of the cricket club in room No. 5, Thomp-

Jurors frequently say that they have an opinion when they do not really mean what they say, and when in reality they have none such, and the judge who presides t the trial thereupon proceeds to satisfy himself as to their competency, to determine the question as to whether they have a prejudice or not, and from the evidence had this case I am satisfied that the jurors under our statute were competent. It does not appear that the court in so many words asked whether they could render a verdict according to the law and the evidence; but when a juror is sworn to try the issues involved he is sworn to render a verdict according to the evidence. bration of the Fourth of July in Helena will be a grand success. Prominent citiresult is that already quite a number of motions for new trials in civil cases which requires that the judge who tried the case in the court below should pass upon the motion for a new trial, and the court says that the same reasons should apply on a rade, the military and civic organizations that the same reasons should apply on a rade, the military and civic organizations to have been attempted, and in addition it has been suggested that there be a night particle times times times times times. To build it, it was necessary to hew down trees the entire distance. At the mine the ground had to be cleared of trees to permit of the erection of buildings.

Relative to the condition of the mine, Mr.

Relative to the condition of the mine, Mr.

Relative to the condition of the mine and the court says in a variety theatre, and "Broncho Liz's" husband paid more attention to the actress husband paid more attention to the actres husband paid more attention to the actress husband paid more attention to the actress husband paid more attention at the actress husband paid more attention to the actress husband paid more attention at the lity of the witnesses, and form his opinion a very little drilling the "boys" could bility of the witnesses, and form his opinion from their appearance and similar circumstances; but in this case no question of that kind arises. In the motion for a new trial there is no question raised as to the credibility of the witnesses, or the nature of their testimony, and therefore one of the strongest reasons why the judge who presided at the trial should pass upon the motion for a new trial does not exist in this case. The evidence has been preserved by the stenographer, which brings about a different state of facts in relation to the preparation of a statement of the evidence to that where reliance is had to the minutes of the court, and when the motion for a new trial came before a judge who had not presided at the trial, it would necessarily follow that he was in no position to review the evidence which had been adduced at the trial, unless counsel agreed thereto.

So, upon a calm review of all the facts of this case, with all the light that they are reliable to the intention of the strength. The railroad employes will probably turn out in force with floats, and other industries will be well represented. Business houses will have an opportunity of vying with each other to see which shall make the best display in the lime of decorations either on floats or in their store windows. The proposition has been made that the pioneers be invited to take a distinctive part in the celebration, which will mark the second step in the advance of Montana from the territorial condition to statehood. The races will be on that week, and that will furnish an additional and powerful incentive to visitors to come to Helena.
